A SHOWER OF STARS

awarded their medals under General Orders No. 195, the report stated: "In view of the circumstances attending the award of these medals, the board recommends that action by the War Department be deferred pending a possible reconsideration of the law by Congress."

(There was a curious coincidence among the five cases of the 27th New Jersey. It so happened that George W. Mindil had been awarded two Medals of Honor, a rare occurrence, and one of them had been given for gallantry in action in 1862. In fact, Mindil had served with distinction in the Civil War, and his name was to remain on the official Medal of Honor list by virtue of his one "gallantry in action" award.)

In the case of the five civilian scouts which included Buffalo Bill, the report had this to say: "They rendered distinguished service in action, and, in the opinion of the board, they fully earned their medals. It is hoped that a modification of the law will permit them to retain them."

Outside of the traps it had fallen into in dealing with the inscrutable 27th Maine, the board made recommendations which were reasonable, fair and far-reaching. The conclusion of its report, which was tinged with indignation at the legislative instructions under which the board had been forced to operate, did much to put the whole matter into perspective:

... the board invites attention to the large number of officers and enlisted men who have served in the army of the United States from 1861 to date, estimated at 3,200,000, and to the small number of medals of honor issued. It is well known, however, that there have been many cases of heroic conduct deserving of medals which have not been so rewarded. On the other hand, the board has noted some cases which would have been sufficiently and more appropriately rewarded by brevets, certificates of merit, or mention in orders.

In this connection the board ventures to suggest that other insignia, in addition to the medal of honor, be established by Congress to be awarded for distinguished or highly meritorious volunteered their temporary service in the States of Pennsylvania and Maryland." In requesting a medal on the basis of this order Gardiner wrote: "I understand there are a number of bronze medals for distribution to soldiers of the late war, and request may be allowed one as a souvenir of memorable times now past." He received the Medal of Honor.

This matter came up again in 1879, when Thomas C. Reed, formerly of the 27th New Jersey, also wrote in for a medal under the provisions of General Orders No. 195. Action on his application was deferred "indefinitely" on the basis that no money had ever been appropriated for obtaining the medals called for by G. O. 195. This was a highly significant decision; it implied that the G. O. 195 medal was a different medal from that commonly known as the Congressional Medal of Honor. The Army might well have struck by this decision; but it did not, and the lid of a Pandora's Box began to open.

In 1884 Thomas Reed applied again, and in the meantime there had been either a change of personnel or a change of mind. Someone in the War Department made a notation on his application. "It is understood that there is a large stock of medals on hand from which this can be issued if deserved." A Medal of Honor was issued to Thomas Reed on May 17, 1884, whereupon there were applications on behalf of four other veterans of the 27th New Jersey, and medals were issued to all four.

The Secretary of War who approved these applications apparently did not realize that the recognition of General Orders No. 195 as a basis for awarding Medals of Honor left him way out on the end of a limb. Two classes of recipients had been provided for in this order: (1) those who had offered to extend their terms as did the 27th Maine, and (2) volunteer troops from other states who had offered their temporary services in the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland. According to an estimate made later on, around 50,000 men would have qualified under these terms. Many of them, in fact most of them, probably were alive in 1884, and had they all been alerted to rush through the breach that Gardiner and Reed had made, the remaining stock of about 8,300 medals would have been used up in no time, while the worth and prestige of the Medal of Honor would have suffered a corresponding decline.

Fortunately, this did not happen. But no sooner had this threat subsided when another one arose.

In 1886 the Adjutant General's Office published an official circular. It was entitled:

MEDALS OF HONOR

Awarded for

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE

During the

WAR OF THE REBELLION

And among the names listed were those of all 864 members of the 27th Maine—the unentitled as well as the entitled!

And there was nothing to indicate that some of these men had remained in the defenses of Washington while others had gone home. In fact, this aspect of the story seems not to have been entered in the records of the War Department—seems to have escaped its attention entirely. Wentworth's list of the entitled men, if it had ever reached the Department, had been mislaid or lost, or had gotten into the wrong bureau so that the left hand had not been told what the right hand was doing, or even that there was a right hand.

Now somewhere around 560 unentitled veterans of the 27th Maine officially had just as much right to the medals as did the entitled!

It is easy to imagine what might have happened. If Wentworth had sent the undistributed medals back to Washington in 1865, a left hand would have stored them away somewhere. Later, after a passage of years and several changes of personnel in the War Department, a right hand would have issued the 1886 circular. Then MILROY, Robert Huston. Union gen. 1816-90. Ind. After Norwich (Vt.) Univ. he fought in the Mexican War, won his law degree at Ind. Univ., served as a judge, and became active in politics. Commissioned Capt. 9th Ind. 23 Apr. '61 and Col. four days later, he was mustered out 29 July and recommissioned Col. 9th Ind. 27 Aug. '61. On 3 Sept. he was appointed B.G. USV and commanded Milroy's Brig., Cheat Mountain Dist., Mountain Dept. (19 Apr.-26 June '62). He commanded the Dist. 11 Oct. '61-11 Mar. '62 and 11 Mar.-19 Apr. '62 and then took over 2d Brig., I Corps, Army of Va., 26 June-12 Sept. '62. Promoted Maj. Gen. USV 29 Nov. '62, he commanded Milroy's Upper Potomac Div., VIII, Middle Dept., and the Dist. of Winchester, VIII (Jan.-Feb. '63). Heading the 2d Div. in that department (Feb.-26 June '63), he retreated before the Confederate advance into Pa.; extremely high casualties in this withdrawal brought him before a Board of Investigation which exonerated him of any blame. He later commanded the defenses of the Nashville and Chattanooga R.R. (July '64-Apr. '65). His suppression of guerrillas in W. Va. was so vigorous that the Confederates put a price on his head. Resigning 26 July '65, he was later a canal trustee and Indian agent. "Fully six feet two inches in height," he was described by D.A.B. as having "piercing black eyes; and these, together with an aquiline nose and long silver hair, gained for him the sobriquet of the 'Grey Eagle.'"

MILTON, John. C.S.A. Gov. of Fla. 1807-65. Ga. A lawyer, he practiced in Georgia, Mobile, and New Orleans, entering politics as a nullification partisan, and fighting in the Seminole War. He moved to Fla. in 1846 to become a planter and Democratic legislator. Elected Gov. in 1860, he served throughout the war, dying 1 Apr. '65 of a stroke.

MINDIL, George Washington. Union officer. Germany. Commissioned 2d Lt. Pa. 15 July '61, and 1st Lt. six weeks later, he was promoted Capt. 5 Oct. '61 and transferred to the 61st Pa. in Feb. '62. This he resigned 6 Oct. of that year to become Col. 27th N.J. 10 Oct. '62. Mustered out 2 July '63, he was named Col. 33d N.J. 5 Sept. '63 and mustered out of this regiment in July '65. He won two Medals of Honor—the first in 1887 for volunteering his regiment's services on 17 June '63 after the term had expired, and the second in 1893 for gallantry at Williamsburg. Also, he was breveted for the March to the Sea (B.G. USV) and Chattanooga-Missionary Ridge-Mill Creek Gap (Maj. Gen. USV).

MINE ASSAULT (Battle of the crater; Petersburg mine). PETERSBURG MINE ASSAULT.

MINE RUN CAMPAIGN, Va., 26 Nov.-1 Dec. '63. Following Lee's BRISTOE CAMPAIGN, 9 Oct.-9 Nov. '63, Meade took the initiative and attempted to maneuver Lee out of his position on the Rapidan. He successfully crossed at Germanna Ford with his five corps and then turned west toward Orange Court House. Lee's cavalry detected the movement immediately, and Meade found the Army of Northern Va. strongly posted along Mine Run to contest his further advance.

Finding no assailable point of this line, Meade withdrew without attacking and went into winter quarters around Culpeper. This ended major operations in the east until Grant arrived and launched the WILDERNESS CAMPAIGN in May '64.

*MILLER, OSCAR F. Near Gesnes, France, Sept. 28, 1918. R—Los Angeles, Calif. B—Franklin County, Ark. G. O. No. 16, W. D., 1919.	Major, 361st Infantry, 91st Division. After two days of intense physical and mental strain, during which Major Miller had led his battalion in the front line of the advance through the forest of Argonne, the enemy was met in a prepared position south of Gesnes. Though almost exhausted, he energetically reorganized his battalion and ordered an attack. Upon reaching open ground, the advancing line began to waver in the face of machine-gun fire from the front and flanks and direct artillery fire. Personally leading his command group forward between his front-line companies, Major Miller inspired his men by his personal courage, and they again pressed on toward the hostile position. As this officer led the renewed attack he was shot in the right leg, but he nevertheless staggered forward at the head of his command. Soon afterwards he was again shot in the right arm, but he continued the charge, personally cheering his troops on through the heavy machine-gun fire. Just before the objective was reached he received a wound in the abdomen, which forced him to the ground, but he continued to urge his men on, telling them to push on to the next ridge and leave him where he lay. He died from his wounds a few days later. Posthumously awarded. Medal presented to widow, Mrs. Anna M. Miller.

Spurred by unusually large enlistment bounties, Garden Staters flocked to join the ranks of the 33rd New Jersey in the summer of 1863. From Chattanooga to the March to the Sea, they battled the elements and the enemy.

By James M. Powles

In the summer of 1863, amid the unrest and riots following President Abraham Lincoln's widely unpopular conscription of able-bodied men between the ages of 20 and 45, a new regiment of infantry was recruited at Newark, New Jersey. The regiment, designated the 33rd New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, was assembled by a remarkable young colonel named George Washington Mindil at Camp Frelinguysen, on the outskirts of the city. Into the camp, which had been set up at the beginning of the war to receive volunteers from the northern part of the state, came a steady flow of eager recruits.

Besides the threat of the draft, the recruits were lured by a promise of money—$615 in bounties, including $240 in cash—and the always-popular Zouave uniform. The chief purpose of the unusually large bounties was to attract “veteran volunteers”—men who had served before. The bounties worked. Nearly all the officers and three-quarters of the incoming men had seen former service. About half the regiment came from Newark, with the remainder hailing from the surrounding communities and counties. On September 3, after only 55 days of recruiting, the 33rd was mustered into Federal service.

The 33rd's organizer, Colonel Mindil, although only 22 years old, was already a seasoned veteran himself. Born in Germany, Mindil had joined the army at Philadelphia in 1861 as a second lieutenant. As a captain in the 61st Pennsylvania Infantry, the gallant and skillful officer earned the Medal of Honor for his actions at Williamsburg, Va., on May 5, 1862. His citation read: “As aide-de-camp [he] led the charge with a part of a regiment, pierced the enemy's center, silenced some of his artillery, and, getting in his rear, caused him to abandon his position.” The flamboyant Mindil rose quickly in rank and in October 1862 was made colonel of the 27th New Jersey Infantry. In July 1863 the 27th was mustered out of service, and Mindil then turned his attention to organizing the 33rd. On September 5, just before the 33rd shipped out, Mindil was named commander of the new regiment.

The new recruits and veterans proved to be a rowdy bunch that soon became a plague on Newark and proved a handful for Mindil to control. They fought and stole everything in sight, including kitchenware from the local hospitals. Mindil's biggest problems came from bounty jumpers, who took the money and ran after collecting their enlistment bonuses. Desertion became so prevalent that Mindil had to call for help to keep his troops from skedaddling. In response, the 3rd Vermont Infantry arrived from Washington, D.C., and with their help the tough Mindil soon got the desertions under control and the remaining troops in line.

A few days after being mustered in—to the relief of all—the 33rd left for the war wearing their distinctive dark-blue Zouave jackets and vests, red pantaloons, dark blue sashes edged with light Posted well ahead of their supporting regiments at Peachtree Creek, the 33rd New Jersey was hammered by attacking elements of the Confederate Army of Tennessee, as portrayed by Rick Reeves. The Garden Staters managed to regroup, however, and helped push back the Southern columns later in the day.

COLLECTOR HISTORICAL PRINTS, INC., TAMPA, FLA.

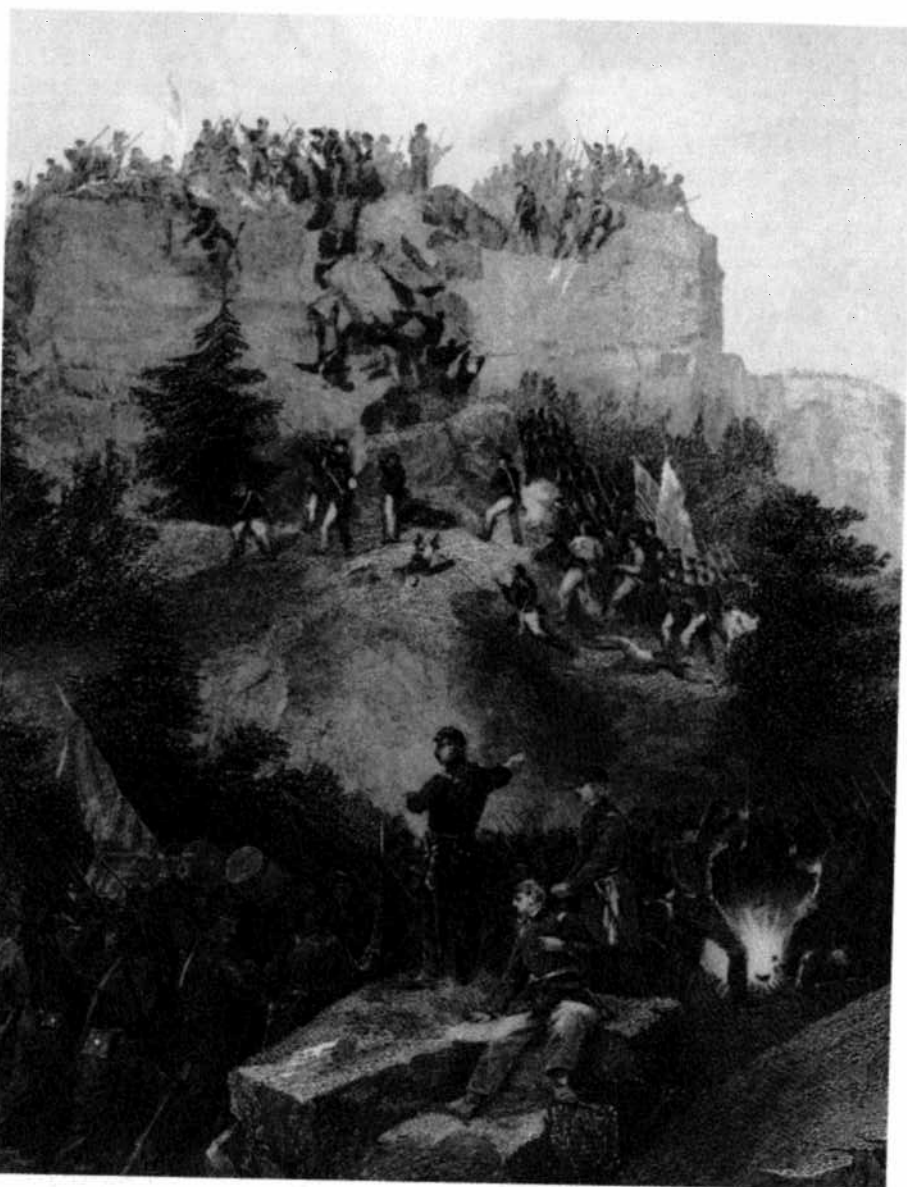

A few days later, the 33rd was placed in a temporary brigade commanded by Mindil and sent to Knoxville to reinforce the Union forces invested there. On December 6, when only 20 miles from Knoxville, the brigade received word that the Confederates had broken off their siege and left the area. The next day the brigade headed back to Chattanooga, where it went into winter quarters. While there, the XI and XII corps were consolidated into one corps, the XX, under Hooker. The 33rd became part of the 2nd Brigade, 2nd Division, commanded by Brig. Gen. John W. Geary. During the upcoming campaign, Mindil would alternate between commanding the 33rd and the 2nd Brigade. When he was absent from the 33rd, his place was taken by Lt. Col. Enos Fourat, an equally capable officer.

On May 4, 1864, the 33rd set out on Sherman's grueling Atlanta campaign. A few days later the Union troops confronted General Joseph E. Johnston's Army of Tennessee at Rocky Face Ridge, west of Dalton, Ga., in the first of many encounters between the opposing forces. Rocky Face Ridge was a long, boulder-strewn eminence running north to south that could only be crossed by way of a few gaps. Sherman's plan was for Thomas' Army of the Cumberland to move against the ridge and occupy the strongly entrenched Confederates while Maj. Gen. James McPherson's Army of the Tennessee moved through gaps farther to the south, to strike at Dalton along the Western & Atlantic Railroad and cut Johnston's supply lines.

While Thomas' main force was attacking the Confederates at Mill Creek Gap at the north end of Rocky Face Ridge, Geary's 2nd Division was sent several miles south to make a demonstration at Dug Gap. Geary, instead of making a demonstration, launched a full-scale attack with his 1st and 2nd brigades. After being repulsed several times, the division commander sent the 33rd, which had not yet been engaged, along with the 27th Pennsylvania and 134th New York, all under Mindil's leadership, a half-mile to the south to scale the ridge and try to turn the Confederate left flank. To distract the Confederates from Mindil's attempt, Geary's main force launched another attack, which was also repulsed.

John Y. Foster, chronicler of New Jersey's regiments in the war, described the ascent up the ridge: "After toilsome effort, over and among rough, rolling boulders, the Thirty-third arrived on the top of the ridge, driving the enemy's skirmishers from it." After passing through several small mountain gaps, the 33rd encountered a row of palisades higher up on the summit.

With no way to flank the Confederate works, the 33rd and the 134th New York made a direct assault. Despite the treacherous terrain and a hail of murderous bullets, many made it to the foot of the palisades, but there they were quickly cut down or forced back to the rocks below. Finding the Confederate position invulnerable, Geary and Mindil called off the attack. That night, as the Confederates were being reinforced, the regiments were withdrawn. Foster wrote of the assault, "It was this stubborn attack, mainly, which compelled the attention of the enemy, who had left open Snake

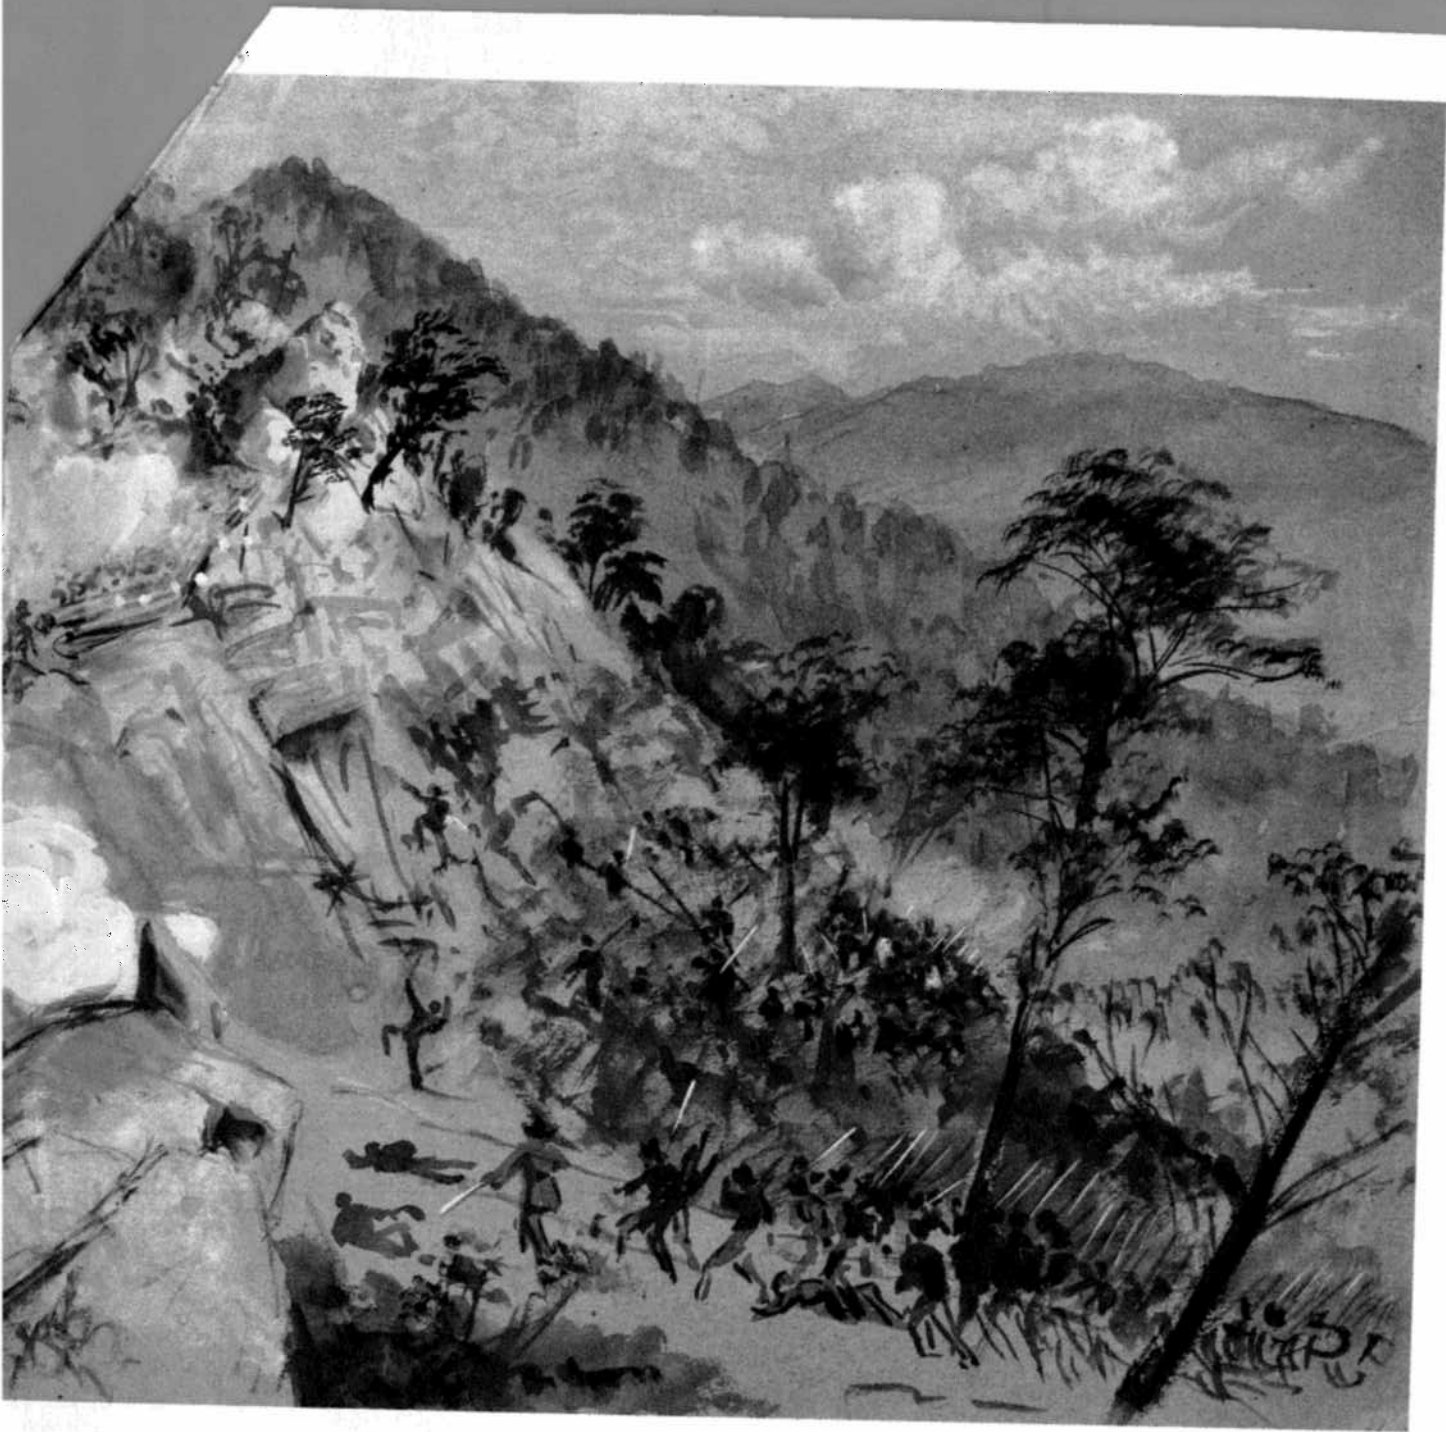

The rugged terrain of northwest Georgia constantly impeded the Union army during the Atlanta campaign. In this contemporary engraving, Union soldiers struggle up the craggy slopes of Rocky Face Ridge, a task the men of the 33rd undertook when they participated in a flank attack at Dug Gap on May 9.

Creek Gap, through which McPherson pushed without opposition, and Dalton, being flanked, was evacuated." The 33rd had behaved with "splendid valor," losing two officers and four men killed and two officers and 23 men wounded, several of whom later died.

In addition to those losses, the 33rd also suffered the temporary loss of its commander. Mindil had reopened an old wound while climbing the ridge and was ordered to a hospital in Chattanooga for treatment. Later in the war, Mindil would be recognized for his part in nearly taking the virtually impregnable Confederate works at Rocky Face Ridge, as well as for his gallant and meritorious services at the battles outside Chattanooga, by being awarded the brevet rank of major general.

Johnston's army, having been outflanked by McPherson, withdrew south to Resaca. Here the Confederates set up a defense on the hills west of the town. On May 14, Sherman began his attack on the Confederates' new line. The next day the XX Corps attacked the Rebels entrenched on the hills. The 33rd went in with the rest of Geary's division, which was in the center of the attack. Braving the full force of the Confederate batteries, the 33rd charged up a pine-covered slope. The regiment managed to make it to within 10 paces of a partially finished dirt fort housing four artillery pieces, troops were swarming around the regiment's flanks and getting into its rear. The men found themselves in the middle of a sea of gray surging toward the main Union line. Convinced that his position was untenable, Fourat reported, "With such an overwhelming force against us and on three sides of us, with such a withering fire from front, right, and left, and the enemy rapidly gaining our rear, to stand longer was madness, and I reluctantly gave the order to retire fighting." As the men of the 33rd made a fighting retreat back to the main Federal line, they lost the state flag that had been given to them only six months before. Fourat described what had happened in his report: "...the enemy rushed upon us with his dense masses and...ordered the surrender of our colors. With this order we could not comply. The fire was terrific; the air was literally full of deadly missiles; men dropped on all sides; none expected to escape. The bearer of the State colors fell...it is with feelings of the deepest sorrow I...report that our State colors fell into the hands of the enemy..." The 33rd's colors had been captured by John E. Abernathy of the 27th Alabama.

Although the 33rd had been shattered, its short stand had alerted Thomas' army to the surprise attack. After fierce fighting all along the Union line, Hood's assault was turned back. The 33rd's men re-formed around the national colors, and the regiment rejoined its brigade in time to help beat back the last Confederate push. For that, it was again commended for bravery by Hooker and Geary. Fourat put his losses for the day at 15 men killed, three officers and 17 men wounded, three officers and 34 men missing.

The regiment spent the next day caring for the wounded and burying the dead. On the following day it moved to within a half-mile of Atlanta, where it threw up heavy fortifications. For the next month the 33rd was involved in the siege of Atlanta. On September 2, with Atlanta having been abandoned the night before, the regiment was among the first troops to enter the city, making camp to the right of McDonough Road, about a mile and a half from the courthouse. While in that location, the soldiers of the 33rd received new clothing, trading in their tattered Zouave kits for the standard Federal uniforms.

I have the honor to reply for leave of absence of thirty days for reasons set forth in the accompanying Surgeon's certificate of disability — I do this very reluctantly — but a regard for my life and future usefulness demands a change of place. I suffered from both of the troubles mentioned by the Doctor for some time, having encountered them during the late campaign — I suffered most acutely in keeping my horse on the return of the Corps from Knoxville — since then I have hoped to recover soon, and although urged by my Surgeons to go home, I feel it my duty to remain here until my command was again completely organized, clothed & equipped. The "advice" referred to having assumed large proportions and a surgical operation being probably necessary, I prefer to have it accomplished by me

Hom. & M. Gallagher:-

Bureau of Census

Washington - D. C.

My dear Mr. Gallagher:-

It is my regret that since my previous application was made, and although I felt sure I might be able to satisfy your requirements, I have not yet been able to do so. I am sorry to say, however, that I understand it is necessary, in order to secure the necessary line of training - It seems strange that the others of the Bureau Major General, in whose charge I understand his matter, and also the daughter of a Colonel who carried the Yellow River at Yellowing, to his grave, should be so young. My name is extremely humble, and in these days of dear Mr. Bruce, it is a pleasure from Bishop's buds melt. As soon you will give this matter your personal attention, for I believe you have more a colder.

Very truly yours.

In the matter of Original Petition for Pension, No 360,215 Next Army Vote, — Personally came before me, a deputy Clerk of Court, in and for abovesaid County and State, George W. Merrill late Colonel 33d New Army Vote & 3d Regiment N. Y. Vets, who, being duly sworn, declares in relation to his, the aforesaid case, as follows: —

That he enlisted in the Military Service of the U.S. in July 1861, being mustered as 1st Lieut Co. B. 23d P.V. Aug. 2. 1861. That for two years previous was engaged in learning the art of the Shanty Business, and for the few years next preceding that time, was a Student in the High School, at Philadelphia.
Previous to and at the time of my enlistment I was in good health. — In October 1861 became Captain of Co. B, the same afterwards as Co. J. 61st reg't Penna Vets. — Remained until Sept. 1861 to Dec. 5. B. B. B. B. B.
March 7. 1862, and in that position, participated in the Battle of the Fairmount. as "Artillery Camp" to Genl Philip Kearny I took active part in Pope's Campaign of 1862 and at Battle of 2d Bull Run, and Chantilly. In September 1862 was

U.S. ARMY
JUL 1863 me to accept promotion as Colonel of the 27th reg't N. J. Vols, being mustered as such October 9. 1862. I served as such until expiration of Regiment's term of service, being honorably discharged July 2 1863. Was then employed by the War Department to raise a regiment of Vermont Militia, which I did, being mustered in as Colonel of the 33^d reg't N. J. Vols Octo, Sept 5th 1863. During my whole period of service from Aug. 2. 1861, the greater part of which was in the field, my health was unusually good, and it continued to be such until after the Knoxville Campaign of Decmbr 1863, in which I participated, and from the same effects of which I incurred the irregularity from which I still continue to suffer, and upon which my Claim for Pension is based. It was on this march from Chattanooga to Knoxville some and return, that I contracted a very severe cold in the throat, throat & lungs, suffering from Pharyngitis & Croup, from which I caught and from which in and.

3.

Spring January 1864 I was detailed as Corp near Chattanooga for three elements of the Regimental Surgeon. Drs. Riley and Briggs, the former now deceased. About February 1. 1864, not infirming in health, I attended 20 days leave of absence, on Surgeons' Certificate of disability" (the original documents having been forwarded to our Bureau) to proceed to my home, in Mississippi, Piscine I was under treatment of my family physician, Dr. Charles Beckler, the Surgeon 75th Penn. Vols., - now dead.
Fifteen miles the accompanying care of Prof John Neill, then Surgeon U.S. Vols. and acting Medical Director of the Department.

Prof Neill died - few years ago.

When I reached Philadelphia my system was untreated both I am, in health, the same well, I was suffering from a large abscess near the lungs, which terminated in fistula in limbo. After some weeks of medical treatment, Dr. Neill & Beckler performed operation, the knife operation for fistula, - the abscess after many weeks began to granulate and get well; but the fistula still continued to discharge. My leave of absence was frequently extended upon Dr. Neill's Certificates, but, learning that a favorable movement of the Army was in contemplation, I left Texas on April 25, 1864 for the front, returning by no means without in-felicity. The Rebelles needed daily bet-ment and forwarding - and the coal brought out as dishwashing, offered to have become chronic in the heart & lungs.

I reached Camp on May 1st and at the head of my troops, set out on the Atlanta Conference, May 4, 1864.

On May 8th I arrived the Rebels interdicted position on Dry Hope, near Dallas Georgia, clambering up the side of a steep Mountain, covered with low rocks, and from one position and appearance, in my deteriorated condition, I again became pro-bated and the steep ground near the line which was about to be, was nearly finally taken over - I was advised by the Surgeon to the rear, reaching Doakland Mountain Officers' Hospital about May 11th. The

I was but a few days & it was deemed expedient to perform any further operations upon me, by reason of my broken-down condition, my system being very much weakened. On May 18th I was reported for "light duty" and detailed as member of the Board for Examination of Officers for General in Charge. While on this duty I was under constant medical care Dr McCleary (?) Surgeon U. S. Vols, then

5.

advanced at Chattanooga, operating upon me; for the first time. On August 8th 1864, feeling somewhat restless in general health and dreading it very important to re-assume my command in the field, I was relieved from "light duty" at my own request, and resuming my posts in front of Atlanta, Geo about Aug. 8. 1864. The first six days continued to discharge, while the rest in the hills and camp, though somewhat exhausted, continued to weaken me. — During September and October 1864, while in Atlanta, though remaining upon duty & in command, I was undergoing daily medical treatment, principally by Surgeon John Riley of my regiment. There was no further knife operation attempted upon the fibrosa, as the cords in the throat and lungs, as well as in the throat, did not seem to get better, my general health was bad, unimproved, and it was feared that the system would not support granulation, & another operation should be performed. Under advice of Dr. H. Farnum Goodman, Surgeon U.S. V.M., Medice Director of 23rd Div. 20th Corps, the fibrosa was treated with stimulating and local ing injections with the syringe, but the tone of the system prevented its healing. About this time, October 1864, a small ulcer made its appearance, for the first time, on the Cantabrigia, of the form as the left No. 10.

 Benjamin Riley admitted its appearance to my genuine delicacy and proceeded to treat it with a stick of lime, without, while he was perceiving for me to build up my genuine health. This alone never was cured, — on the contrary it continued to eat through the the Cantabrigia in spite of the "most heroic" treatment ^{by Benjamin} of the War, and is, at this writing, in some condition I can see. The hole through the Cantabrigia is large enough to receive the end of my finger through it, & the heavy discharging of Benjamin are daily and obvious. — Towards the end of October 1864, my health failing to improve, Dr. Riley recommended that I apply for leave of absence to proceed home, where by better care and nursing force, my system might be sufficiently strengthened, to finally finish operation upon the system, at this time, I was suffering very much from rheumatism & cough, so well as to think. — Benjamin Riley strongly advised my application for furlough to the effect that I was in the high road to consumption and that an immediate change was necessary to save my life. The application was returned from Army that he with the assistance, that in view of the severity of the case, I had better forward my resultion. — Before this could be done, the communication of the Army with it, was of sufficient consequence, and it was forced to remain.

37.

Respects finding my work and pecuniary condition, and the terrible sufferings from the fistula and abscess, I advised my command, and at the heart of my regiment started on the Campaign from Atlanta to Brownsville, Nov. 15. 1864. It was agony to ride; but I managed to do so, with both legs in some state of the lame and out in the shingles. — The Campaign continued about four weeks — until Dec. 21. 1864 when Savannah was captured. During the whole of this time I was under the doctor's care and treatment, but never relinquished command in spite of the most agonizing pains. I remained on duty as the subsequent campaign of Fort Mifflin in South Carolina — in North Carolina, & through Virginia to Washington, — being most of the time in command of a Brigade, and never ceased of my ailments. In July, 17th inst, 1865, by reason of the end of the War, I was honorably discharged the U.S. Service, at Newark, N. J. When I reached my home, at Philadelphia, Pa., I was completely broken down — a physical wreck — still suffering from two running sores — the fistula in ano and the Ulcer in the nose, — while the cold contracted in December 1863 had become chronic in the throat, throat and lungs — broke payment & pecuniary abundance from in the legs, arms & shoulders.

I at once placed myself under the medical care of Dr. Charles Reichen, our family's physician, who treated me in latter part of 1865 and early part of 1866 — and as my health did not appear to improve, but on the contrary, a more abject pauper about the extreme opening of the Fishers, more painful and violent than before, I placed myself under the professional care of Dr Joseph Paucot, the eminent Surgeon of Niles, under whose ablest medical treatment and surgical operations, in 1866 and 1867, I began to mend. For five years I was under Prof Joseph Paucot's care — was operated upon 4 times for the abscess & the Fishers — the ulcer in the nose was kept open, being changed & treated with antiseptics, and ligatures applied up the nostrils, and the cells in the system furnished for — the abscess became entirely cured, and the cell which had formed upon the lungs was after some years driven through — the Fishers too after years began to granulate and get well, and now there are but few & occasional discharges through, the extreme opening being completely closed. — There is still a little fisher there. But the ulcer never yielded to any treatment — and yet after years, it continued on its burning course, and just now, is worse than ever — having eaten away much of the middle Callosity of the nose, & discharging constantly a very bloody pus. —

9.

Dr. Wm. W. Parson, now Professor of Anatomy in the Jefferson Medical College, after assisting his father Prof. Asa Parson during the period just alluded to, and from 1872 to 1878 I was more or less under the care of the former, & principally as to my cough & bronchial difficulties, and the ulcer in the nose. For the former I experienced much relief, but in spite of the most careful attention and most elaborate treatment, the ulcer has continued on its way of destruction. As the great active and efficient ability of the two Prof's Parson & I and others, one my life, as I was for several years, pulmonary consumption when I became this victim.
Although, Dr. Bellamy, & now of Cleveland, Ohio, treated me for the ulcer, but without success. — For the last few years I have not been under any physician's care, as I continued to treat myself from time to time, with the remedy, and in the manner, heretofore employed by them.

The present condition of my health is about as follows: — Constant Cough in the throat, which has recently become chronic, according by occasional neurotic pain in the eyes and in the ears - at times, considerable sickness of matter and Henry has through the hostile - In fact, this cell in the 'Heal' is characterized in December 1883, has increased in activity from 7 per to 7 per; more or less trouble at all times, but especially in rainy and damp weather, with my heart - frequently accompanied by distressing cough; abnormal pain quite frequently in the limbs and shoulders, a want of strength and steadiness of respiration when any physical exertion is made by me. - And last, but by no means least, the one-esting, some or less in the nose, which never ceases to discharge. - Undoubtedly much of the Henry sickness through the hostile comes from the throat - in this is too much in proximity to procure solely from the throat. -

The effect of age this is to unfit me totally for muscular labor, and often, when the head pains me, for labor of any kind. My sense of hearing has become diminished & I fear permanently impaired, and the eye-sight, markedly weakened.

The least physical effort produces 4 mg, and then I find it impossible to concentrate my thoughts or attain a peaceful, untroubled, sleep. —

GENERAL AFFIDAVIT.

State of Pennsylvania } County of Philadelphia } ss.

In the matter of Original Return Clarina Ann 360,215 of Genl Geo. W. Meindell, late Colonel 33d. Pennsylvania

Personally came before me, a Notary Public in and for aforesaid County and State, William H. Hancock, aged years and citizen of the City Philadelphia, County of Philadelphia, State of Post Office Address

Pennsylvania, well known to me to be reputable and entitled to credit, and who, being duly sworn, declares in relation to aforesaid case, as follows:

That I am personally acquainted with Gen Geo. W. Meindell and that shortly after his discharge from the Army, in 1866, he placed himself in the service of my Father, Dr. Joseph Hancock, for treatment. At the time, I was acting as assistant to my Father, and am therefore thoroughly conversant with Gen. Meindell's case. He was then suffering from very severe cold, coryza, bronchitis and gangrene of the throat. On the result of an abscess, there was ulcer on the cartilage (which is the left side of the nose), and from a functional disturbance of the heart, the result of great debility, all of which had been contracted in the military service. For upwards of five years he remained under treatment of both Dr. Joseph Hancock and myself - his constitution being so weak, that the use of any imminent danger of his life.
When the general tone of the system had been somewhat restored, and the lungs freed from disease, an operation with the knife was performed on the trachea and it was slowly submitted to heal. In 1872 Genl Meindell came under my exclusive care and treatment, especially for the trouble with his throat, for the cold and the heat and throat, and for the ulcer in the nose, since when he has been under my professional care, more or less, to the present time. And while progress has been made - still in damp and wet weather, he continues to be seriously troubled with the chronic affection of the throat, as well as with catarrh and rheumatic pain in the head. The ulcer in the nose which at first was but a small

"the head and throat, and in the absence in the nose, since when he has been under my professional care, never has been to the present time. And while progress has been made - still in damp and wet weather, he continues to be severely troubled with the chronic affection of the throat, as well as with catarrh and neuralgic pain in the head. The ulcer in the nose, which at first was but a small cavity on one side of the septum, has in spite of the most judicious treatment, continued to eat its way through the cartilage, until now the opening is large enough to receive in it the first of the index finger. The work of destruction is backward and forward, towards the nose. The discharge of bloody pus from the head, through the nose, as from the nostril itself, is constant and copious, and I have always considered this as a symptom or stage Catarrh. From what I know of Emil Meridoli's constitution and his ailments, he is obliged to be exceedingly careful of his health, as exposure of any kind would bring on a complication of his troubles, he being very susceptible to the contraction of fresh cold and cough. And so, he has had cough during the entire treatment of the case. But for his obstinacious habits and careless, regular mode of life, he could not have lived to this time. In my opinion, on account of the chronic I contracted in the Army, for which I have now treated him for over 15 years, and from most of which he still continues to suffer, I deem him entirely unfitted for the performance of manual labor.

SEP 10
And I, the undersigned, further declare that..... I have no interest in said case, and am not concerned in prosecution, and am not related to the applicant.

Witness my hand and seal this 10th day of September, 1900.
