Case No. 23.

INDIAN RIFLES. SOME OF THESE RIFLES WERE CAPTURED AND OTHERS
SURRENDERED BY HOSTILE INDIANS (SIOUX AND CHEYENNE) SOON AFTER THE CUSTER MASSACRE, JUNE 26, 1876, ON THE LITTLE BIGHORN RIVER, WYOMING TERRITORY.

- 324 Sharps' Breech-loading Rifle, cal. .52 Paper cartridge. Primer-lock. C. Sharps' patent, Oct. 5, 1852. Marked, "SHARPS RIFLE MFG. CO., HARTFORD, CONN."
- 325 Indian Musket, cal. .58 Percussion. Barrel and stock cut down, walnut stock; much worn, and ornamented with brass tacks.
Iron-mounted. Strip of buckskin hanging from guard-bow.
Marked, "ELI WHITNEY, NEW HAVEN, CONN."
- 326 Indian Rifle, cal. .50 Percussion. Octagon barrel, maple stock;
worn; has been broken, and repaired with rawhide. Marked,
"H. E. LEMAN, LANCASTER, PA."
- 327 Indian Rifle, cal. .54 Percussion. Octagon barrel, maple stock, broken; much worn, repaired with rawhide. Brass-mounted.

CASE OF INDIAN RIFLES MADE BY DIFFERENT GUN-MAKERS. THESE RIFLES WERE CAPTURED, AND SOME OF THEM WERE SURRENDERED BY HOSTILE INDIANS (SIOUX AND CHEYENNE), SOON AFTER THE CUSTER MASSACRE, JUNE 26, 1876, ON THE LITTLE BIG HORN RIVER, WYOMING TERRITORY; 18 PIECES.

[These arms were captured by Lieutenant Clarke of the Second U. S. Cavalry and turned over to the United States Government at Cheyenne, and afterwards sent to the National Armory at Springfield, Mass. Here these rifles went through examination, and were finally condemned and sold at auction to New York parties. It is said by good authority that every brass tack in these rifles represents a scalp.]

Ordnance Notes--No. 115.

Washington, October 1, 1879.

Report of a Board of Ordnance Officers composed of Captain John E. Greer and First Lieutenant Rogers Birnie, jr., upon certain small arms captured from hostile Indians. Approved by Colonel J. G. Benton, Ordnance Department, Commanding the National Armory.

(10 PLATES.)

NATIONAL ARMORY,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.,
July 27, 1879.

Of the large number of arms received at this Armory from the various Indian agencies, the larger portion of which were muzzle-loaders—some even having flint locks—four were turned over to the Board as being either the most powerful or the most rapid firing guns in the collection.

These were as follows:

No. 1.—Sharp's breech-loading target rifle, cal. .44, center fire; old model; set trigger. Weight of gun 12 pounds 12 ounces; tip-stock partly gone; original weight probably 13 pounds. Barrel heavy, octagonal; length 30 inches. Chamber bottle-shaped; number of grooves, 6. Twist of rifling uniform; rifling freed out 1½ inches beyond shell chamber. Rear sight, "buckhorn;" slide on leaf so loose as to indicate that it could not have been used. Front sight bright but rough; probably made from a silver quarter-dollar.

No. 2.—Same as above, except that the barrel was but 22.9 inches long; weight 9 pounds 6 ounces. Rear sight in good condition; front sight so loose as to affect accuracy of fire unless great care was used.

A cast in sulphur having been taken of the chambers of these guns, it was found the ammunition required was that known as "Sharp's long range." Weight of powder 77 grains; weight of ball, patched or grooved, 470 grains.

No. 3.—Winchester repeating (17 shots) rifle, cal. .44; rim fire; model 1866. Octagonal barrel; length 24 inches. Weight of rifle 9 pounds.

No. 4.—Same in all respects as No. 3. Rear-sight leaf broken off. Ammunition: weight of powder 26 grains; weight of ball 202 grains.

The ammunition for all these guns was purchased at the Winchester Repeating Arms Company's Armory, New Haven, Connecticut.

The barrels of these guns having been thoroughly cleaned were examined and found to be in good order.

On account of the small charge carried by the Winchester repeater it was tested in comparison with the Springfield carbine for accuracy, rapidity and accuracy combined, power—as shown both by penetration in white pine and computed energies—and initial velocity. Similar comparisons were made between the Sharp's and Springfield rifles.

The results are given in the following tables:

1. WEIGHTS, &c.

ARM.	Weight of Arm.	Length of Barrel.	Weight of Powder-charge.	Weight of Ball.

LOADED ARMS.

During the examination it was found that 36 of the muzzle-loading rifles were loaded. These arms had the charges of powder and lead carefully withdrawn and weighed separately. The resulting weights are given below:

I.—TWENTY-TWO LEMAN GUNS.

Charges of powder.			Charges of lead.
Number of charges.	Weight of each charge, grains.	Total weight, grains.	Number of charges.	Weight of each charge, grains.	Total weight, grains.
2	30	60	1	140	140
1	35	35	4	160	640
3	40	120	1	165	165
4	50	200	1	190	190
6	60	360	3	200	600
2	70	140	1	210	210

1	90	90	1	235	235
1	110	110	1	250	250
			1	260	260
22		1,275	22		4,530

Average weight of charge of powder = 57.9 grains. Average weight of charge of lead = 205.9 grains.
Weight of maximum charge of powder = 110 grains. Weight of maximum charge of lead = 260 grains.
Weight of minimum charge of powder = 30 grains. Weight of minimum charge of lead = 140 grains.

Dear Dr. Frost:

This letter is to certify that I purchased the "Sitting Bull" rifle and four Sioux and Cheyenne guns (as described and verified by photos) from the U. S. Cartridge Company Collection in 1942. The descriptive catalog as compiled by the U. S. Cartridge Company, along with the guns and Custer letters were sold to you and shipped on October 5, 1962.

I am sorry I lost the original Bill of Sale.

Thank you.

Dear Dr. Frost:

Your letter of November 8 pertaining to the United States Cartridge Co. and the painting "March of Time" by Henry Sandham has come to this office for reply.

In May 1906 the United States Cartridge Co. of Lowell, Massachusetts deposited in the Smithsonian Institution a collection consisting of approximately 569 weapons. The collection was displayed until August 1931 when it was returned to the company. It was later sold at public auction.

This collection contained a few Indian guns and several of these were said to have been owned by well-known chiefs. The enclosed pamphlets on Indian weapons are furnished by our Publications Office.

An 8x10, glossy black and white print of the painting "March of Time" may be obtained for 75 cents. Your remittance should be made out to the Smithsonian Institution and should accompany your order. When ordering, please refer to negative number 15099.

If we may be of further service to you, please let us know.

Very sincerely yours,

M. L. Peterson

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to testify that I purchased, from Dr. Lawrence A. Frost of Monroe, Michigan in February, 1976, a Gallagher carbine rifle, Ser. #2347. This gun was acquired by Dr. Frost from Dr. Victor Neu of Green Bay, Wisc. Dr. Neu bought the gun in 1942 at a sale of weapons from the U.S. Cartridge Company Collection.

The Gallagher was listed in the sale catalog of that collection as item number 332.

The carbine is distinguished by Indian tack decorations and a piece of yellowish, braided rope attached to a saddle ring.

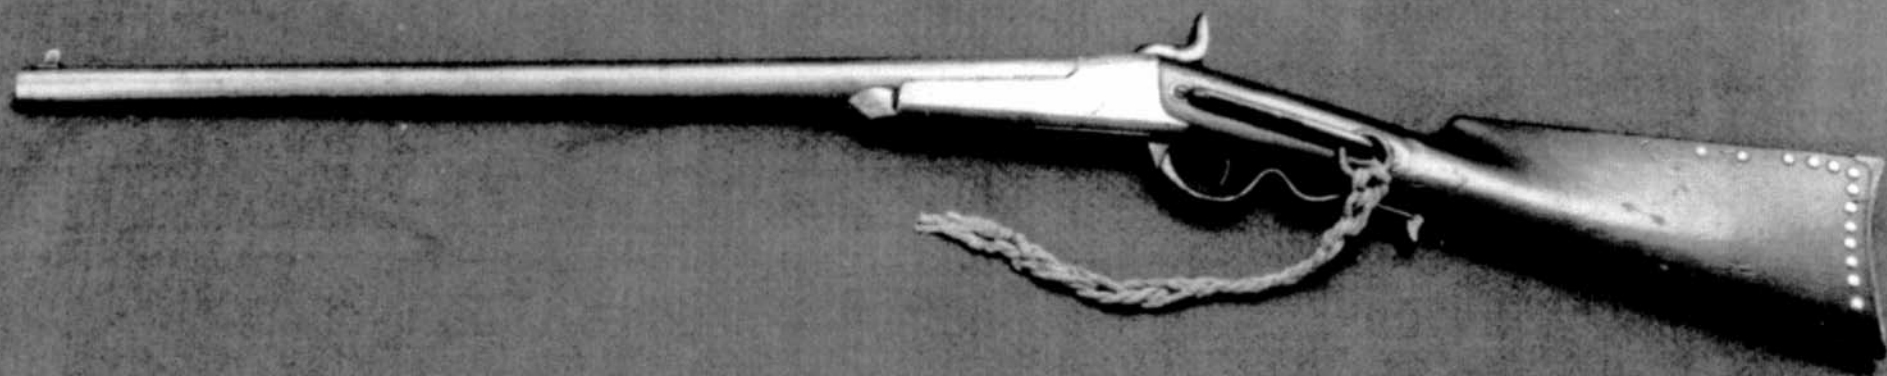

I have this date sold this historic firearm to Mr. Jim Strouse of Jefferson County, Colorado.
